22) The salary of the office of Trade Comr. has not been definitely fixed, and the terms are settled with personal reference to each incumbent. Mr. B. T. Kesava Iyengar & Mr C. R. Rao Sahib were drawing £ 1,600 per annum, while £ 1,400 is fixed in the case of Mr Iswaran.

23) Mr. Rice may not be exactly on a par with an officer subject to all the restrictions of the M. S. R. On the present occasion, he may have to be in charge of the office of Trade Comm. for about a month (from the date of Mr. C.R. Rao Sahib's going on leave until arrival of Mr Iswaran)

2) It is seen that Mr. Rice has been in charge of the duties of the Trade Commissioner for fairly long periods in the past without any additional remuneration. There does not seem to be any justification for giving him additional allowance now for a period of one month and odd.

3) Mr. Rice is a retired officer getting a pension of Rs 6,000/- per annum at the special exchange rate of 1 sh. 9 d. a rupee. He gets now therefore a pension of £ 525/- per annum and a remuneration of £ 720/- per annum as Deputy Trade Commissioner, making up a total of £ 1,245/- or Rs 16,600/- per annum which is very nearly the salary he was drawing as Chief Engineer (Rs 1,400 X 12 = Rs 16,800/-). From this aspect of the case also there is no financial justification to give any additional allowance to Mr. Rice during the period he may have to look after the duties of the Trade Commissioner.

4) It is a fundamental principle that no retired officer re-entertained should get more than what he was getting when in service.
